Message from the Publisher

Since we talked in earnest last October, the editorial contributions of State of the Domain have been on hiatus, though we kept our quarterly data publication schedule with a Q4 2002 summary at our web site, www.sotd.info. In this issue, we review the first set of numbers for 2003. It's good to be back to a full issue.

Data in this issue

Last year, we heard from a number of you who said, "I really don't need data down to the fine granular detail." No problem for us, we thought, we'll just halt the registrar market share figures after the top 25 in each category.

After a couple of months of this, though, we heard a change in tune. Several of you got in touch to say you'd really like to see the full registrar universe at a glance and relied on us to provide the picture (as you might guess, a few of these requests came from registrars themselves). Again, not a problem—you'll see here that we're back to the full lists. We'll plan to stay with that arrangement from here forward.

Also, we're pleased to tell you that for this issue, we are partnering with the team at NameIntelligence (www.nameintel.com) to provide the statistical data. Jay Westerdal and Ray Bero bring their considerable data skills to bear in a way that is beneficial to us and our readers, and we're proud to have the opportunity to work together.

Thanks again for your readership. Please stay in touch at publisher@sotd.info.

State of the Domain is a quarterly publication of SnapNames.com, Inc.

To accommodate inclusion of a full set of data, the report is typically released several weeks following quarter-end.

SnapNames compiles data in the public domain in order to present information on industry trends.

The editors assume that readers are already familiar with the industry and its terminology — for readers who are not, we recommend the www.ICANN.org site as a starting point for definitive historical documents and technical resources.

SnapNames does not warrant the accuracy of information in this document. Please read further disclaimers and information on our methodology within.

NOTES FROM ALL OVER

Roundup of industry issues, trends, and news

by Mason Cole

PRO sunrise begins

The .Pro Sunrise period is for Intellectual Property (IP) Defensive registrations only. Defensive registrations do not resolve in the DNS, but do block others from registering the same name. IP Defensive registrations must be associated with a trademark held by the registrant.

New UDRP Search Tool

Four foundations, including The Cornell Legal Information Institute and The Markle Foundation, have created a new search engine that can locate decisions from all domain name dispute resolution providers. Currently, the search engine database holds 4,090 cases, but the developers plan to have all decided disputes accessible within a few weeks.

DNS pioneer warns of Internet security

The Internet community can ill afford to rest on its laurels as far as DNS security is concerned. When it comes to the Domain Name System, the database architecture at the heart of the Internet infrastructure for the last 20 years, "the majority of the work to be done still lies ahead of us," said Paul V. Mockapetris who co-invented DNS.

Disputes -- Where it's AT

The Austrian naming authority launched a dispute resolution system to handle clashes over .at domains. The new service is designed to provide a quick, cost-effective alternative to legal proceedings.

Dutch domain name arbitration procedure could be illegal

An arbitration procedure established in January by the Dutch domain-naming authority, SIDN, for settling '.nl' domain name disputes conflicts directly with EU and Benelux law, according to Alexander Tsoutsanis, a researcher from Leiden in his recently published book on domain-name disputes.

In Defense of Dashy Domains

Dashed domains are worth pondering for what they can reveal about marketing via search.

Nominet to charge for domain transfers

Nominet, the body that oversees Internet domain name allocations in the UK, is to begin charging for transferring domains from one person or organisation to another.

Domain Names: Memorable, Global, Non-political?

Everyone understands that something happened to the domain name system in the mid-90s to turn it into a political minefield, with domain name squatters and trademark lawsuits and all the rest of it. It's tempting to believe that if we could identify that something and reverse it, we could return to the relatively placid days prior to ICANN.

Methodologies & Statistical Accuracy

Name Intelligence generates statistics via a list of all domains published in the COM, NET, ORG, BIZ, INFO, and US zone files. Only active domain names appear in the zone files, although a domain name does not have to be attached to a web site to be included in the zone files. It is possible that a registrar could have domain names that are on hold, or domain names that do not have name servers listed, thus causing our report-generating process not to “credit” the registrar with such domain names. Overall industry reports are run daily from zone files produced daily from all the registrars. Because some domain names may be transferred, expire, or expire and be re-registered by another registrar during the report production period, it is possible for those names not to be included in the report.

Daily reports are the result of the difference between two zone files monitored 24 hours apart. A domain name appears on or disappears from a zone file if:

- It was just registered and is being placed into the zone file;
- Its status is being changed from registrar or registry “hold” to “active”;
- It is being placed on hold in the normal process of expiration;
- It is being placed on hold because of a dispute;
- Its name servers are being permanently disassociated
- Name server changes are made during the cycle when the zone file is generated.

Often registrars will report numbers of current registrations and percentages of market share that are larger than those documented in this report. This may be due to a number of reasons, including, but not limited to:

- Transfer of names from one registrar’s accreditation to another’s (perhaps the result of an acquisition);
- Allocation of names from a reseller (operating under another registrar’s accreditation) to its own accreditation (in order to avoid double-counting, in this report’s compilations, each registration is assigned to the actual registrar of record as documented in the zone file, regardless of the reseller that technically sold the name and manages the customer); or

- Inclusion of ccTLD registration totals or other types of names.

The above information is accurate to the best of Name Intelligence’ knowledge and within reasonable margins of error. Name Intelligence is not liable for any reliance on this information. Persons with corrections or other comments are encouraged to immediately bring them to Name Intelligence’ attention.
